Abstract

Kathleen Bergeron works as one of two archivists for United Houma Nation, a state recognized Native American Tribe with an enrollment of approximately 19,000 members residing predominantly in six coastal parishes of Southeastern Louisiana. United Houma Nation have resided in the coastal parishes for the past 300 years. Kathleen will give a brief overview of her tribe and discuss the importance of the Houma tribal community's connection relating to the BOEM/Nicholls State University Project.
